

Phearin trained as a nurse before coming to AEC to specialise in ear healthcare and audiology. His family are from Takeo Province. Having also worked as a medical representative he wanted to be able to work more closely with the patients, especially those who are poor and unable to access healthcare. In clinic he is fascinated by new cases and enjoys studying pathophysiology to enhance his understanding of the mechanisms of the ear.

Originally working as a laboratory technician, Malyna wanted to work more closely with patients and to directly help poor people and children in Cambodia. She has experience of delivering education talks as a youth volunteer. She is transferring these skills at AEC to help others learn the importance of protecting their ears to reduce hearing loss. As a trainee she learns many new skills and increases her knowledge in many subjects; however she is particularly enjoying her anatomy studies.
